Huestis assumed athletic director duties at Ponaganset in 1981 while continuing to teach reading at the middle school. During his 23 years as athletic director, Huestis coached middle school soccer from 1986 to 1990 and one season as the middle school's boys basketball coach in 1992. Huestis also assisted with the high school's girls soccer team until 1998, and continued to volunteer as a coach for the team until 2003.

During his 23 years as the Ponaganset athletic director, Huestis played a key role in updating the school's facilities, including urging the passing of a bond for a new track complex that included bleachers, a concession stand and a football/soccer field. He also was responsible for rebuilding the baseball field with dugouts and adding a softball field.

When the school added boys and girls tennis, Huestis spearheaded the building of four tennis courts. And, his pride and joy was the addition of a 3.2-mile cross country course (complete with a covered bridge) that is used annually for the state cross country meets.

Huestis earned his bachelor's degree from Rhode Island College in 1966 and his master's from the same school in 1972.

Don Riviere

Berryville, Virginia

Don Riviere was one of the early leaders in the athletic administration field – both at the state and national levels – during his 27 years at three high schools in Virginia.

Riviere launched his career in 1965 as athletic director at Francis Hammond High School in Alexandria, Virginia, before there were any state or national organizations for high school athletic administrators. In 1973, Riviere became the athletic director at T. C. Williams High School in Alexandria – two years after the 1971 football team at T. C. Williams High School won the Virginia AAA state championship and, in 2000, was the subject of the motion picture, Remember the Titans.

At the time Riviere became athletic director at T. C. Williams, it was the largest high school in the state. Perhaps his greatest accomplishments in 17 years as the school's athletic director was overseeing the consolidation of T. C. Williams and changing its image from one of poor sportsmanship, weak financial management and viewed as non-competitive, into one of the most respected programs in the state.

Among his numerous accomplishments at T. C. Williams, Riviere established weekly eligibility cards for the school's athletes, assisted in developing a $1 million boat house to serve 200 crew participants, directed district and regional track meets, directed the T. C. Williams Invitational Track Meet for many years, initiated the hiring of athletic trainers for middle schools and high schools, established athletic training and weight rooms, secured a new all-weather track and new football/track scoreboard and organized/supervised graduation ceremonies for 12 years.

In his final three years before retiring in 1992, Riviere was athletic director at James Robinson High School in Fairfax County, which was also the state's largest high school at that time.

At the state level, Riviere was a charter member of the Virginia State High School Athletic Directors Association (VSHSADA), the forerunner of the Virginia Interscholastic Athletic Administrators Association (VIAAA). He also was a regional director on the VSHSADA Board of Directors, president of the organization and chairman of the state conference. He also provided strong leadership for the Virginia High School League (VHSL), serving on the VHSL Executive Committee from 1991 to 1993.

Nationally, Riviere attended his first National Athletic Directors Conference in 1972 – the year after the conference was started by the NFHS – and was the only Virginia attendee. He attended every conference until his retirement and several more afterwards, and he was responsible for creating enthusiasm for the athletic administration profession in Virginia. He became an active member of the NIAAA, serving on the Ways and Means Committee and as a frequent workshop speaker.

Riviere, who graduated from high school and college in Canada and received his master's from the University of Virginia, has been honored on many occasions throughout the years. At the state level, Riviere was selected VSHSADA Athletic Director of the Year, and he received the association's Outstanding Leadership Award, Distinguished Service Award and John C. Youngblood Lifetime Achievement Award. In 1995, he was inducted into the VHSL Hall of Fame.

Among his national honors, Riviere is a previous recipient of the NIAAA State Award of Merit and NIAAA Distinguished Service Award.

He succeeded Jerry McGee, the longtime leader of athletic administration in the state of North Carolina.

Turner's ascension to the NCADA executive director position culminated a journey started in 1995, when he joined the organization. In 1998, he accepted the athletic director position at Southeast Guilford High School in Greensboro, where he served for eight years. In 2006, Turner moved to Wilmington, North Carolina, and was athletic director at Ashley High School for nine years before becoming NCADA executive director.

In addition to his 20 years as an athletic director, Turner also coached baseball and football at the junior high and high school levels. Turner created student-athlete handbooks at all three schools and, during his nine years at Ashley High School, Turner created the Varsity Club, the Athletic Honor Society and the Senior Awards Banquet.

At Southeast Guilford, Turner hosted numerous sectional and regional events for the North Carolina High School Athletic Association (NCHSAA) and served as chairperson of the NCHSAA Sectional Basketball Committee in 1997. Prior to his retirement in 2015, Turner scheduled all middle school athletics in New Hanover County in addition to his duties at Ashley High School.

Turner has made enormous contributions to the NIAAA and athletic administration at the national level through his involvement with the NFHS, the National Association for Sport and Physical Education (NASPE) and as a member of the National Executive Directors Council (NEDC).

A lifetime member of the NIAAA, Turner has served on the NIAAA Board of Directors and the Leadership Training National Faculty. He has been North Carolina's representative to the NIAAA Delegate Assembly and has represented North Carolina as the co-state coordinator for NIAAA Leadership Training since 2002. Turner was the recipient of the NFHS Citation in 2006 and the NIAAA Frank Kovalski

Professional Development Award in 2009, and he was selected National Athletic Director of the Year by NASPE in 2010.

In 2014, Turner was recognized as one of the Top 100 Athletic Administrators for the past 100 years by the NCHSAA. When he retired in 2015, Turner received the Jerry McGee Award of Excellence and the NIAAA Jim Teff Achievement Recognition.

Turner earned his bachelor's degree from East Carolina University in Greenville, North Carolina, and his master's from North Carolina A&T University in Greensboro.

Bruce Whitehead, CMAA

Westfield, Indiana

Bruce Whitehead retired in June 2016 as executive director of the National Interscholastic Athletic Administrators Association (NIAAA) after a highly successful 11½-year term as head of the national organization for high school athletic directors. Altogether, he served the NIAAA in an administrative capacity for 15 years, beginning with his 3½ years as an assistant to Frank Kovaleski.

Shortly after becoming NIAAA executive director in 2005, Whitehead developed a plan to grow the organization apart from the NFHS and, in 2007, established its own office at another location in Indianapolis. As a part of the arrangement, the NIAAA became an equal partner with the NFHS in conducting the annual National Athletic Directors Conference and assumed control of the Interscholastic Athletic Administration (IAA) magazine.

During Whitehead's tenure as executive director, NIAAA membership grew from 5,400 members to 10,300, and Leadership Training and Certification programs continued to expand in the number of courses and certification levels. He directed the establishment of the NIAAA Hall of Fame, the Student-Essay Scholarship program and the beginning of a marketing program for the organization.

In addition to growing the membership, under Whitehead's leadership the NIAAA was successful in gaining North Central Association CASI accreditation in 2011, doubling the association's budget and completing three Strategic Plans.

Before joining the NIAAA staff in 2001, Whitehead had an extensive history with the organization dating to its inception in 1977. An NIAAA member since then, Whitehead has attended the National Athletic Directors Conference since 1981 and was a member of the first class of athletic administrators to become Certified Athletic Administrators in 1988.

Whitehead was a member of the NIAAA Resolutions Committee from 1988 to 1993, including chairing the committee the final two years, and was the secretary-treasurer of the NIAAA from 1995 to 2001. He was on the Host Committee for the 1982 National Athletic Directors Conference in Indianapolis, and he chaired the Host Committee for the 1992 national conference.

At the state level, Whitehead was a member of the Indiana Interscholastic Athletic Administrators Association (IIAAA) Board of Directors from 1979 to 1987, including a term as president. After he retired as NIAAA executive director in 2016, Whitehead assumed the duties of IIAAA executive director.

From 1989 to 1998, Whitehead was a member of the Indiana High School Athletic Association (IHSAA) Board of Directors. During this time, he was chair of the IHSAA Study Committee that recommended implementing a multiple-class championship instead of a single-class championship for team sports.

After graduating from Purdue University in 1968, Whitehead became a math teacher at Crawfordsville High School, where he piloted the school's computer curriculum in 1972 and coached tennis, baseball and basketball. In 1976, he became director of athletics, a position he held until leaving for the NIAAA position in 2001.

While at Crawfordsville, Whitehead expanded the program from 13 to 20 sports, created a coaches handbook, established an Athletic Hall of Fame, instituted an athletic discipline code for all athletes and hosted more than 200 IHSAA tournaments.

Among his many honors, Whitehead received the NFHS Citation in 1992, the NIAAA Distinguished Service Award in 1994 and the NIAAA Award of Merit in 2003. He was the IIAAA Athletic Administrator of the Year in 1992, received the IIAAA Charles Maas Award in 2002 and was awarded the Sagamore of the Wabash, the state's highest civilian award, in 2015.
